

NATIONAL MISSING PERSONS WEEK: RADIO SCRIPT

It's not like it's a time of day or a memento that reminds you of the person that's gone missing, it's always there.

We had noticed a slight decline in his health, one of the diagnosis' that had come through was that he may have early dementia.

It's hardest that we can't say goodbye like have a funeral or give Pop what he deserved.

No knowing where mum is, is like living in darkness, we just continue to live in hope really.

National Missing Persons Week, please keep an eye out and visit www.australia.gov.au