Circumstances:

Craig Taylor was last seen on 3 September 1993 at his grandparents shack in Coningham, a southern suburb of Hobart.

Prior to his disappearance, Craig lived with his family in Launceston and had two older sisters, Susan aged 14 years and Margaret aged 12 years. The Taylor family often spent school holidays at a shack belonging to Mrs Taylor's parents located in Coningham. The family had visited on numerous occasions and Craig would have known the local beach, main road and local area well.

Mrs Taylor and the children arrived at the shack on Thursday 2 September 1993 intending to stay until 9 September. At about 9.30am the next day Craig spoke to his mother, made her toast and had his own breakfast. Later Mrs Taylor asked him to get dressed as she intended to take him with her while she travelled to Kingston to do some shopping.

However, when she was preparing to leave she found that he was not in the house and calls for him in the close vicinity were unsuccessful. Mrs Taylor went to Kingston at about 11.30am leaving her daughters at the shack. She returned about 1pm, and Craig had still not returned.

Craig has not been seen since.
